

Abstract

The invention relates to an external fixator which has a retaining member (1) and connecting elements (2) which can be connected without screws to a bone or bone 5 parts (5), in particular to both halves of an opened sternum, and provide possibilities for increasing or reducing the compressive stress between the two bone parts or sternum halves.